Nessa has just given birth and the event triggers in her psyche a series of thoughts for every taken decision. She is a reporter from Puerto Rico, who works freelance for various media. She is also dedicated to cover ecological terrorism assignments in various parts of the world as Australia, Canada, or Costa Rica. The nature of her research sometimes put her in danger because of the complexity of the demonstrations and protests against the extinction of certain species of turtles in the Caribbean.

Nessa is in love with a married photographer, Alexia, who is addicted to feng-shui. Both decided to share a relationship, which place them in the vortex of an extreme situation, until the point of the disappearance of one of them without apparent hope to meet again. Carapace is the first lesbian fiction novel written in Puerto Rico, then published by Editorial Egales in Spain.
