Meeting Gabe, over spring break, had been absolutely amazing for Jessica. Then came the hard part. She was back in Michigan finishing her eleventh grade of high school while he was on the farm, in Tennessee, working. Six hundred miles of road separated them, but not their love for each other. Gabe drove up to visit every couple of weeks, but while the days dwindled away the end of the school year, his work picked up, making it difficult to come up as often. Feeling down over a number of events, Jessica went home on the last day of school depressed...until one phone call changed her entire summer.
