

Lost Girl

Author:	J.C. Grey
Goodreads Rating:	3.59
Pages:	320
Genre:	Suspense
Language	English
Published:	January 23rd 2017 by Harlequin

Lost Girl.pdf

Lost Girl.epub

She's the 'It' girl who had it all—so why has she run? Emerald Reed-McAllister, a high-profile model and stylist, has always been careful to make sure no one sees the real her. Not even her husband Marc—ambitious, intelligent and adoring—knows the real Em. So when tragedy sends a wrecking ball through her seemingly perfect world, she flees—heading far away from the life she has created for herself.

After a near collision in the dark, Em, in a panic, steers off the road and discovers Lammermoor House, a crumbling old ruin that seems mysteriously welcoming—even, just perhaps, a sanctuary.

As the days pass, Em starts to believe the house is having a healing effect on her battered soul. But not everyone is happy about Em being there ... A series of odd events make Em feel a little uneasy. Was the flicker of movement in a window just a bird flying by or something else? Why are some in town so insistent she leave right away? And what is behind the locked door on the first floor? But as the house slowly begins to reveal its secrets, past and present collide with devastating impact and Em finally comes to understand what really matters. And to save what she treasures most, Em will have to face all the ghosts of the past... An atmospheric and haunting story of mystery and romance from a modern-day Australian Daphne Du Maurier.