Accountants need love too James Winchester is content with his predictable small town life. He lives alone, helps out at his family farm, and doesn't miss an ice cream social. His life is so neat and ordered he could use one of his accounting spreadsheets to chart his upcoming years. Evelyn Prentiss's world is in chaos. She's returned to her home town twenty years after leaving and the transition isn't as smooth as she'd anticipated. Her home needs renovated, her parents are once again too hands-on, and she only has the summer months to settle in before she starts her new teaching job. In an effort to be a good neighbor, James finds himself stopping by Evelyn's house more and more to help with her end to-do list. When a mystery from their past resurfaces and opens old wounds, the two find comfort in each other. And so much more. - See more at: <http://musapublishing.com/index.php?m...>
