These seven tales by B. D. Harris for children and adults alike are illustrated short stories that explore fatherhood and loss. The featured tale in the anthology is 'The Magician', which is about a young boy whose magician-father dies, only to leave his magic behind. The young boy must do all he can to try and save the magic that his father left behind from the frightening Deafeners and Blinderers. Only 100 copies were printed as the limited first edition, and every copy is signed and noted by the author. The limited first edition is a classically designed hardcover of royal blue fabric and titled in silver foil.
